Support Bulletin # 84 Serial Kits

In ABM2009 Service Pack 1, Kit products may now have serial or lot numbers in both the parent kit and/or the components. Examples are mobile phones which have serial IMEI numbers, foods made from lot numbered ingredients, etc.

- If the parent product is serial or lot number tracked then ABM assumes that the kit is being stocked prior to sale. In other words, users can view the parent and assemble the kits and, at that time, can specify the serial/lot numbers of any components and also the new serial number assigned to each parent product. When the parent is sold, only the serial number(s) of the parent will be requested.
- If the parent product is not serial or lot tracked then ABM assumes that the kit is not being stocked prior to sale. When the parent is sold, the serial number(s) of all relevant components will be requested. The kit cannot be pre-assembled and stocked because, having no serial number, there is no way of knowing which serialized components each parent product contains at the later time of sale.

Kits without serial or lot numbers work the same way as before.

ABM can handle any number of serial or lot numbered components in kits
